

From the moment Detective Jim Ballard enters the room, his years on the homicide detail began to send out signs; this was not a normal homicide case. Bending down to look at the body, covered by the papers scattered about the room, he picks up a handful of papers. Leafing through them, he is quick to notice; they are all typed manuscript pages. There were thousands of pages taken out of their folders and scattered about as if in a fit of rage... or to torment someone by destroying a lifetime of work. Glancing at the body, he asks "Is there something here in these manuscripts so incriminating that it would cause a person to commit murder?"

Everyone has a conspiracy theory, but as Jim is quick to discover, he is working on a full fledged conspiracy that has been in progress for the past fifty years.... Is this really possible? Could their plan really work? They have been working to destroy the education system of this country and as the murdered professor stated: Dumb down the population - to create, "A Generation of Clones
